The tram takes you directly to the exhibition grounds (final stop "Messegelände"). You can also reach the Leipzig Exhibition Centre by regional train (RB) or suburban train (S-Bahn). On arrival alight at the station "Leipzig Messe". Information on all local transport connections to the Leipziger Messe is available at the trip planner from Leipziger Verkehrsbetriebe

By Train: There are hourly connections from Leipzig to all major cities in Germany. Travellers can then change to S-Bahn trains bound for Messe at Leipzig Central Station and at the S-Bahn Mitteldeutschland City Tunnel stations. Information on transport connections to the Leipziger Messe is available from the Deutsche Bahn timetable information service as well as from the Mitteldeutscher Verkehrsverbund and Leipziger Verkehrsbetriebe.

By Plane: Leipzig/Halle Airport is located in the heart of Central Germany and is easily accessible from the Leipziger Messe: It takes about 10 to 15 minutes via the motorway and eight minutes by S-Bahn S 5, running every half hour. Other travel options are via Berlin's airport BER or the airport Dresden. There is a direct ICE train from Berlin Central Station to Leipzig that takes 1 hour and 15 minutes, and from Berlin Südkreuz in 1 hour and 5 minutes. It takes just under 2 hours by car from the BER to the Leipziger Messe.
